Comment Reasons:

Comment: I have lived in Cheam with my family since the early eighties, during my time I have observed Cheam and Sutton to have become increasingly diverse. The current congregation use the local church in Belmont for their prayers and this is usually not large enough on certain days. Having become much frailer in my latter years I find going there, however, a great source of comfort and helps me to keep physical contact with the outside world. I would expect the new centre/mosque to be outward looking to the wider community as so many mosques are and to provide programmes for all denominations for example food banks, support for the elderly etc.
